Supported by
Otter Rescue
We look after baby and injured otters that need our help. Eventually, they are released back to the wild where they belong!

Otter Trade
Otters across the world are being taken from the wild for fur and pets. We are working to reduce this trade and train more people to help.

Education
The biggest problem otters face is a lack of awareness. We are educating children, just like you, so they know more about otters and how they can help. We also hold workshops all over the world to train more people to help protect otters.

Research
We conduct research all around the world so that we know more about otters. The more we know, the more we can help them!

TeamOtter is a group of kids all around the world who want to make a difference for otters and our environment. We need your help to spread the word!

Visit TeamOtters website www.loveotters.org for information, games, quizzes and much more.

Why not send your artwork, pictures and poems in for a chance to have them placed on the TeamOtter website.

MEET THE OTTERS

MtOtter is a group of kids all around the world who want to make a difference for otters and our environment.

We need you to join...

What can YOU do?

Be a voice
Otters can’t talk! It’s so important that we talk for them. Tell your friends, family and everyone you know all about otters, what makes them so great and how we can help!

Run an event
You could do anything you want. This could be to raise money for otters, or simply to tell everyone just how great they are! Visit the ‘Help Us’ section of the website for ideas!

Visit the Ottershop
All proceeds for IOSF’s Ottershop go directly to otter conservation. There is some stuff there that I am sure you will love - www.ottershop.co.uk

World Otter Day
Join IOSF and many other otter lovers on the last Wednesday in May every year to raise awareness for our favourite animal!

Post on social media linking to IOSF’s pages and using #worldotterday. Run your own event to raise support and awareness.
